

Courtney Reagan was named general assignment reporter in March 2011 for CNBC's business day programming. While she predominantly focuses on the retail sector, Reagan also reports from the New York Stock Exchange, New York Mercantile Exchange and Nasdaq trading floors on general business news and trading action. She regularly appears on NBC's Today show and Nightly News, as well as MSNBC often contributing consumer and retail related stories.

Previously, Reagan anchored the daily business headline cut-ins for CNBC, the NBC affiliate stations, MSNBC and CNBC world. She also worked on CNBC's planning team and was a segment producer for CNBC's "On the Money," where she pitched, wrote and produced feature and news hits and packages for the program. Reagan began her career at CNBC in 2006 on the newsdesk.

Reagan is an active supporter of the New York City Affiliate of the Pancreatic Cancer Action Network and a participant with TEAMHOPE, the organization's program that allows participants from around the country to train for a variety of events (from 5Ks to marathons), while raising funds and awareness for the fight against pancreatic cancer.

"My desire to raise awareness, funding for research, and comfort to those suffering from pancreatic cancer is done in memory of my Aunt Peggy. Peggy Reagan Walkup passed away at age 46 from pancreatic cancer and not a day goes by that I don't miss her terribly. I would do anything to have just one more day with her, and want to do whatever I can to keep others from feeling the same way about their loved ones. Sadly, the New York City Marathon was cancelled in 2012, but I was still able to raised $13,550 as a part of TEAMHOPE. To learn more about my experience and efforts with TEAMHOPE please click here."

Prior to CNBC, Reagan participated in the NBC Page program where she held positions at "Dateline NBC" and "Weekend Today," and also worked in guest relations for the network. Reagan also held positions at ESPN Networks and Merrill Lynch, and served as on-air talent at Miami University Television and Radio.

She holds bachelor's degrees in finance and mass communication from Miami University in Oxford, OH, and will graduate with her MBA from NYU's Stern School of Business at the end of May 2013.

Follow Courtney Reagan on Twitter @CourtReagan

To learn more about the Pancreatic Cancer Action Network, visit www.pancan.org.